OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR SELLING OF HAWAIIAN BONDS

Col. Charles J. Mc Carthy, territorial treasurer, who returned this morning from a visit of several months on the mainland, is entirely satisfied with the prospects for selling Hawaiian bonds. Col. McCarthy went to the states to place the bonds on the market.

"As soon as business conditions have become a little more settled," said the treasurer today, "I am satisfied that our bonds will find ready sale on the mainland. Locally the people are giving evidence of doing their part in the purchase."

Col. McCarthy says that Hawaiian bonds rank in New York and other big cities of the East higher than state bonds. He has arranged with a mainland firm to handle sales there.

If the bonds could have been sold two weeks earlier is no doubt that they would all have gone. In New York, the treasurer says, as it was, informal notice had been given that the second Liberty Bonds were to draw 4 per cent. interest by the time the bids were opened. It was impossible to put the bonds on sale any earlier, however.

Treasurer McCarthy points out that with plans and specifications to be made and bids to be opened it will be from three to six months before any big work can be started here, so the demand is not pressing for immediate sale of all the bonds.

While on his trip the colonel made an extensive study of road systems. He is of the opinion that the roads for Hawaii should be either heavy bituminous surface. He also studied harbor equipment and brought back blue prints and photographs to the harbor board, of which body he is a member.

He says that the Hudson river from the Harlem river to the lower bay is packed close with Norwegian and Dutch freight ships that have been refused licenses to sail to Europe with supplies. On the railroads freight trains take precedence over passenger trains, and all talk is of the war.

FINANCIERS TO DISCUSS SECOND LOAN CAMPAIGN

Meet This Afternoon to Outline Best Methods of Making "Drive" a Success

Initial steps towards launching the campaign for the second Liberty Loan in the Hawaiian Islands will be taken late this afternoon when a meeting is held by the four leading bankers in the senate chamber of the capitol building. A. Lewis, Jr., of the Bank of Hawaii, E. I. Spalding of the Bank of Honolulu, L. Tenney Peck of the First National Bank, and A. W. T. Bottomley of Bishop & Co. together with a number of other well-known financial men and Major Francis J. Green will be present at the informal discussion of the best methods that can be used in making the second Liberty Loan drive a success.

The local bankers and financial men behind the movement to push the second Liberty Loan campaign along the lines of the idea adopted on the mainland did not learn from Major F. J. Green until yesterday evening that he had been appointed by Governor Pinkham to handle the campaign following instructions received from Washington, D. C. The point which the bankers have been trying to solve is why the appointment should come through the governor when the appointment for the islands should be made by James K. Lynch, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank and chairman of the Liberty Loan executive board of the twelfth federal reserve district to which district these islands are attached.

But this difficulty in respect to leadership in the campaign is expected to be easily settled this afternoon during the meeting since Major Green has intimated that he is too busy to aid in the work, and will tender his resignation from the position to Governor Pinkham.

The appointment of a chairman and an advisory council is expected to arrive by cable tonight from San Francisco from James K. Lynch, in whom is vested the right to make the appointment for this territory because of the fact that he is head of the federal reserve district under whose jurisdiction these islands come.

There will be considerable discussion on the plan of campaign to be adopted. The majority of the leading bankers and businessmen are in favor of forming a large committee to embrace representatives from banks, trust companies, brokers, transportation men, wholesalers, retailers, labor manufacturers, army and navy, and the ladies. This committee will work under the advisory council if the plan carries out.
